Collaborative interdisciplinary team

Supportive work environment with mentorship opportunities

Evidence-based practice and education

"I have felt fortunate to lean on the experience and knowledge of the nurses around me. Having those learning opportunities available have made such a difference in becoming the nurse I am today. There is always someone willing to answer your questions and to learn from."

– Maya Goldberg

There are several different units within the Surgery Program, as well as three high observation units, and a new Epilepsy Monitoring Unit (EMU) that offer diverse and comprehensive post-operative care for a wide variety of surgical needs.

Subacute and acute units support care and are also an environment for learning, welcoming students from a variety of health care faculties.
